

Abstract

Lesson study is “a collaborative professional development process that involves joint lesson planning under a common goal where teachers engage in planning, implementing, observing, and reflecting on a lesson. This lesson study, developed at the Park City Mathematics Institute, describes the entire process from the beginning email introductions of the six group members through to the teaching of a developed middle school lesson on how change is represented graphically.